

Abstract

A graphical element selection program facilitates the selection of a concave portion of a model, by introducing a water source model with which an image of water flowing down from a water source can be conjured and selecting the concave portion in which the water is accumulated from the model.